Raise the Bar!

ou are thinking too small when you consider the destiny of your child. It's human nature for us to mentally disqualify ourselves and our kids from the huge call God has on each of our lives.

Perhaps your hopes have been dashed in the past. When we get disappointed, what do we do? We dial down and lower our level of expectation. But we must refuse to live there! We must all rise above the level of past disappointments. It's time to turn up our thermostats. We are called to change the world.

"But we are without renown," some say, and "such a vision seems presumptuous and out of reach," say others. But I say, "Let us dare to believe God!"

Something in your spirit is throbbing. Somehow you sense there is more for your children. Something is telling you the standards in your home aren't enough. Something is telling you the standards in our churches aren't enough. For our children's sakes, let's raise the bar in our homes and in our churches.

It is an atrocity to leave a child to himself, wallowing in mediocrity while excellence is only a few steps away. What a pity! What a waste of potential! What lives remain unmoved by this beige approach to living! We must dare to believe God to keep His Word as we follow His pattern for raising our children. We can bank on these promises. Will you join me afresh in believing?

Our children are called to be agents of change. Our children are called to have an impact in the world. My prayer is that this book will impart to you an undying hope to believe for more with regard to your children than you ever have before. May you have hope that is tangible and real—hope that will bring change. May the words on these pages be like a missile: power-packed with a substance that, upon release, deposits an actual ingredient to transform the way you see yourself, your kids, and your God.

Where is the one who brings courage and breakthrough to create the valiant, fighting world-changers? Let it be us! We must dare to raise the bar and believe!
